

Over the past year or so, I have been listening to K-LOVE. It has been easy and uplifting for me. I live in a small town so to be able to flip through the stations on the radio and make such a find is wonderful. See, my town is not near big cities where you can turn the dial and hear what ever you want. We are stuck with the same old music that hit the east coast last year. One does not usually get the chance to say, "I remember when that came out." I have a job in which i take care of youth that have either been taken out of their homes, or they are delinquents. It is not a job that gets many rewards. I turn K-LOVE on when I goto work at night and when I come home in the morning. (I work midnights) One thing that I have noticed is that the consistancy that they have aired has been great. They are always just as good in the morning as they are at night. Sometimes when I am upset from work, I will turn the radio on th K-LOVE and it will just calm me. Trust me, there are days when I think that nothing will do that at all. I am just one person, just think about the other countless others there mush be. If all else fails, my one roommate opens her windows and cranks it up. This is what she calls her window ministry. Their use of time is also great. They give you the news that other stations just look over. I like to hear about the small stories as well as the big. I like to hear how many people are being helped around the world. They are real stories that get people's attention. Not only do I listen to the station, but so do my roommates and a 3 year old. He has listened to K-love so much that he is able to sing the call-sign, and even start to sing along in the car. We travel alot with him because we are taking him back and forth to his grandparents for visitation. They aren't Christian and is sharing what he hears and sings to them. He loves to sing. He has decided that he really likes third day. My roommates and I sing in a trio, so we are always listening for new music. K-love is clean. That is something that you can't say about too much today. Since when did the radio become a political problem. Growing-up, I heard every type of music on the radio except Christian. They may have given them a small spot on Sundays, but nothing more. Yes, I listened to FM radio. I don't know anyone that doesn't. People aren't going to leave FM radio if they don't know something else is out there. The first time I found K-LOVE was an accident. Over time, in both cars I own, it has its own button. It is even the first one. So many people in the world are searching for something, but not sure for what. K-LOVE gives them a what. Having them where thy are on the radio makes them convient and funny. On my radio they are between a hard rock station and a country station. They are right where thay need to be. God is always in the middle of everything wheither you know it or not.
